Aboriginal Legal Services Prince George - Cases of Tort law deal with civil wrongs. For example, if you have sustained undue harm or an injury as a result of negligence or intentional wrongdoing by another individual, you could be eligible for damage payment in a tort law case.

The most common types of tort law cases comprise: negligence leading to medical malpractice and personal injury and car accidents. Our firm's lawyers would help you determine which charges must be laid against the responsible parties. Even parties indirectly involved with an action which caused you harm may be held accountable for damages. Like for example, the delivery truck driver might be held accountable for harming you in an accident, but so may the employer that hired the driver. Multiple parties may, in certain situations, be charged with negligence for the harm which you sustain.

Our tort lawyers are skilled at trying tort law cases. If you have been badly impacted by a civil wrong, get in touch with us for an evaluation of your case. We would help you to know your legal options and guide you through all aspects of the tort law case.
