

Wrongful Dismissal Lawyers Prince George

Wrongful Dismissal Lawyers Prince George - With a snap of your employer's fingers, you lose your job or are demoted and your life crumbles apart. Try as you might, it is impossible to support your family when your funds are gone and you can't find gainful employment. If this is you, it is possible that you have a wrongful dismissal situation against your boss.

If you are a boss who likes to fire someone but do not want to encounter a lawsuit. There are some important questions that you need answered and a wrongful dismissal lawyer can help answer them.

A wrongful dismissal lawyer can give answers as well as advice so as to help cope with your difficult case. Our company prides itself in making certain that your rights are protected whilst helping you accomplish your personal objectives.

If you file a suit for a wrongful dismissal, you can be compensated by the courts for the amounts you would have received according to your previous salary and benefits. On the other hand, whichever pay or notice that you received is subtracted from the awarded amount.

It is your task to look for work when your position is terminated. The court takes into account your efforts, but would also subtract any salary earned through the reasonable notice period from the awarded amount.

If you were given notice less than you were entitled to, for example, the court could recompute the amount could have earned at a different job and award damages accordingly. The courts take into account moving expenses, stock options, vacation pay, bonuses, pension, insurance and medical plans when determining how much damages they should award.

In extreme situations, the court could likewise compensate an employee for experiencing defamation, abuse or mental distress after termination.